INTRODUCTION

The Industrialized Building System (IBS), is an approach of construction that will dramatically change the scenario of the construction industry towards mass production of construction materials. Recognizing the potential of IBS in the industry, Government of Malaysia has implemented the roadmap for the development of IBS in Malaysia. The use of IBS assures valuable advantages such as:

- Less wastage, less volume of building materials
- Construction site cleanliness
- Better quality control
- Promote a safer, greener and more sustainable construction
- Efficient use of resources
- Reduction of unskilled workers

Timber industry is one of the targeted industries to implement this IBS. Timber industry can participate in the implementation of IBS either as producer, fabricator, and transport provider or as consultant to provide consultancy services in utilizing timber for IBS. Timber will be a promising material for the IBS application if the right grades, species and properties of timber are used as well as proper handling of the material in accordance with quality assurance systems.

MTIB is one of the agencies responsible to promote IBS for timber. MTIB has been actively involved in promoting greater utilisation of timber in the domestic market by organizing several awareness programmes and seminars. This seminar is aimed at providing better insight on IBS for timber as well as heightening awareness on the application of IBS and prefabricated timber products in construction. It is also a platform to promote IBS compliant timber components, to specifiers and developers.
